THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

50X1

1. In August 1953, troops of the 83rd Heavy Machine Gun Battalion in Zvezdets (N 42-07, E 27-24) were detailed to do guard duty at a radar site in Indzhe Voyvoda (N 42-13, E 27-24). Guard detachments from other ground units at Zvezdets were also detailed for this duty on a rotation basis. The detail consisted of 12 soldiers to guard four posts.

2. [REDACTED] the radar site, located about 500 meters north of Indzhe Voyvoda, was large and was enclosed by barbed wire. The one building within the enclosure was occupied by the Soviet troops who operated the radar equipment and a company (rota) of Soviet troops lived in or near Indzhe Voyvoda.

3. [REDACTED] no other radar sites in this area and never heard that any Soviet troops were stationed elsewhere in Bulgaria. (See page 2 for the location of the radar site.)

1. Comment: [REDACTED] it was not unusual for Soviet troops to man such posts in Bulgaria since technical equipment was produced only in the USSR and skilled Soviet electronic technicians were required to operate it.
